ONLY ONE MORE WEEK OF HIGH VOTE

YOU MUST HURRY TO BE ON TOP AT END OF FIRST PERIOD
SATURDAY, JUNE TWENTIETH

They're off in a cloud of dust! The bars are up, the track is clear and everyone of the workers in this newspaper's "Weekly Payroll" subscription drive are out to win first honors as the figures for the first week's work show.

Those who have been thinking of getting into this race, drawing down their weekly pay check and in the end riding home in that fine 1936 automobile, should lose no further time. Every day you postpone action, is that much good time lost, time that can never be recalled.

There are rich opportunities, as you can readily see by glancing at the list of entrants, for new members to get into the race and make themselves important factors and probable winners of the very best prizes.

The time for action is now. Determination to win, backed by a little well directed effort during the next few weeks will make any one a winner. Once in, stay in. As in all life's game—business, politics, social and otherwise—the most aggressive players pluck the plums.

Time Is Limited
This great opportunity which the Wm. Semmler Publications offers is limited in time. It will not last long. July 11th is the closing day and as each day ends the end of the race is nearer and your opportunity draws to a close.

Right now your time is worth a great many dollars per hour. It is worth as much as any other person entered in the race. But if you allow another to make better use of their time than you are making of yours, the other fellow is making more money than you are. SOME ONE OF THE WORKERS IN THIS RACE IS EARNING MORE THAN $150.00 A WEEK FOR THEIR NEXT FOUR WEEKS WORK. ARE YOU THE ONE? YOU CAN BE IF YOU UTILIZE YOUR TIME AS YOU SHOULD.

Big Reduction in Votes
Don't forget that on Saturday evening, June 20th at 8 o'clock sharp, not a minute later, a big reduction in votes takes place. Also, don't forget that all subscriptions not turned into the contest manager before the closing hour of the period will have to be counted as second period work and second period votes will be issued thereon. Therefore it is to the interest of each and every worker to get every subscription possible placed to their credit before the closing hour of the first period. IF YOU FAIL TO DO SO YOU WILL HAVE TO ACCEPT THE LOWER NUMBER OF VOTES THEREON.

Every worker should get busy right now making a list of their friends so as to be sure they will not overlook a single subscription between now and June 20—the end of the first period. In many cases workers have been given promises and an indication as to the length of time each friend would subscribe for. No further time should be allowed and each case should be followed up with business-like regularity, and practically every promise will be made good. Your friends who have told you, will be disappointed if you fail to come back.

Now is the time to get the jump on the rest of the field and pile up the kind of a lead that you can hold right on through to July 11, the closing day.

Notice

There shall be no fire crackers sold or fired in the village of Frankfort before the third day of July, 1936.

Signed: Village Board of Frankfort.

Miss Bertha Benson Of Mokena Is a Pretty June Bride

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place last Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in the Bethlehem Lutheran church in Joliet, Ill., when Miss Bertha Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena and Mr. Gordon Oliver Swanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Swanson of Joliet were united in marriage.

The church, beautiful in architecture, was more lovely with the addition of palms and garden flowers, and with the lighted tapers on the two candelabras made a perfect setting for a June wedding.

Preceding the ceremony Mr. Arthur Carlson of Joliet sang: "At Dawning" and "Until" accompanied on the organ by Miss Bertha Holmstrom, also of Joliet.

At the appointed hour, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bridal party approached the altar. Mr. Olander Benson, brother of the bride, as best-man, entered from the side, and met Miss Edna Swanson, sister of the groom, who was maid-of-honor, who came from the rear of the church. She was lovely in an aquamarine lace gown, lace hat to match with white gloves and slippers and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses and snap dragons.

Little four-year-old Carol Benson of Mokena, niece of the bride, was a picture with her curly flaxen hair, yellow taffeta silk dress and white shoes and stockings. She was the flower girl who preceded the bride to the altar, dropping yellow rose petals which she carried in a small white basket.

The bride, stately and sweet, in a gown of white satin cut on the princess style with a long train, and with a finger tip tulle veil, flowing from a cap caught with orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of lily-of-the-valley

Rockford, Ill., brother of the bride and Bertel Swanson of Joliet, brother of the groom. They and the groom and best-man wore white flannel trousers with blue coats.

Following the services in the church, the guests returned to Mokena to the St. John Evangelical church, where, under the direction of Mrs. Fred Brown a four course wedding dinner was served to 140 guests.

Replica First Will County Postoffice

Above is the picture of the replica of the first post office in Will County as depicted on the float of New Lenox Township in the big Will County Centennial parade held in Joliet on June 4th. room were very lovely, all laid with a white cloth, centered with bowls of roses and blue and white candles. The guests were seated by unique place cards, the handwork of the bride, which were cut to represent a church steeple, with a spray of lily-of-the-valley and a silver minia ture bell which gave out a musical peal when rung. The waiters at the dinner were the former camp-fire girls of Miss Benson when she was their guardian a few years ago.

At the close of the dinner, all departed to the Benson home where the many lovely and useful gifts were viewed and where the many friends, especially those from Chicago, enjoyed roaming through the lovely garden and garden house in the rear of the Benson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Swanson departed that evening for their home in Chicago where they have their apartment all furnished and where they will make their future home. The next day they left for a motor trip to New York City to visit with Mrs. Swanson's relatives.

Mrs. Swanson has worked in the office of the Weighmaster of the Chicago Board of Trade for many years and all those in that office, together with the Weighmaster, and with their wives, attended the wedding.

Mr. Swanson is a pressman employed in the printery of the firm of Lineham & Weldt in Chicago.

The many friends of this happy couple wish them many years of health and good fortune as they travel life's pathway together.

Change Tinley Carnival Dates

The grand and gala Tinley Park Carnival week conducted by all the local organizations which had been originally scheduled for July 1st to July 5th, has been changed to July 4th to July 8th inclusive.

This change of date was made necessary because of a disappointment in the contract for the rides.

The contracts for the carnival equipment and rides had been made and properly signed last February.

The committee felt secure that all details were taken care of when the disturbing rumor came to them indirectly that there was a probability of the ride contract not being full filled. Upon a thorough investigation this was found to be true. At this late date and especially the 4th of July being the peak of the carnival business, this created a most distressing situation.

After two days of intensive search and many hours of pleading, begging and chiseling, the committee have finally secured a suitable arrangement. It being impossible to hold the original opening date of July first, it is most fortunate that the July 4th holiday was able to be saved for the carnival week.

So all in all friends, after much difficulty and worry the committee can promise you a grand and glorious week of July 4th.

The carnival will open promptly at 1 p. m. on July 4th. The Frankfort band, consisting of 52 pieces will be here. Later on in the evening will be held the great public fire works display. This display will start in with a bang consisting of repeated machine-gun like terrific bomb explosions which will be heard for a distance of five miles. This will be the opening salute and you certainly don't want to miss it. A public address system will be installed all around the grounds and will furnish plenty of music all day long.

On Sunday, July fifth will take

Frankfort Shows Old Time Husking Bee

Frankfort Township had a very interesting float in the Will County Centennial parade at Joliet June 4th. The float shown above depicted an old time husking bee replete with old time music played by John Harnack and with Herman Schweser of Mokena serving as the caller for the old time square dances. Quite a number of "red" ears of corn were in evidence and added to the merry scene. This float created much comment.

Engineers of the state division of waterways surveyed low water conditions in the Fox river after receiving complaints from Lester J. Norris, president of the Fox Valley federation, blaming diversion of water for power purposes. Norris sent a telegram to C. F. Thompson, state director of conservation, declaring that large numbers of fish were trapped and died below St. Charles dam because the flow was shut off at up-river dams. Conservationists seek to enforce a gentleman's agreement among power users not to draw water off to a point more than 6 inches below the crest of the dams. BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A MOONLIGHT VISIT

BILLY MINK was just plain mad. He had begun to get that way when he found the trap set at the entrance to one of his favorite holes. But when he found a little fence on each side of the Laughing Brook right across where he was in the habit of running when traveling up and down the Laughing Brook, and in the middle of each little fence an opening with a trap in it, Billy lost his temper completely. He ground his teeth and his eyes grew red with rage. You see, he knew that those traps had been set especially for him.

"Booh!" said Billy.

"I despise a trapper," snarled Billy. "Yes, sir, I despise a trapper. It is bad enough to be hunted, but then a fellow does have some show. He knows where the danger is and what to look out for. If he is reasonably smart he can fool the hunter. But traps don't give a fellow any show at all. They are sneaky things. They jump up and grab a fellow without any warning at all. I hate traps and I hate trappers! I wonder if I can find any more traps along the Laughing Brook?"

Billy continued on up to the very beginning of the Laughing Brook, but found no more traps. Then he curled up in one of his favorite hiding places to rest and think things over. He was strongly tempted to go away from the Laughing Brook altogether. He thought of going down to the Big River for a long visit. He felt sure that if he kept away from the Laughing Brook the trapper would become discouraged and after a while take up his traps. He had just about made up his mind to leave that very night when he happened to remember that while he knew all about those traps, he had friends who didn't know anything about them. "I guess I'll stay around a while and see what happens," muttered Billy.

That night Billy went for another look at those traps. By and by, a little noise caught his quick ears. Instantly he was alert and watchful. There was a rustling of leaves, and then out on an old log full in the moonlight crept a plump form, and sat down. One glance was enough for Billy. Without a sound he slipped up behind the plump form.

"Booh!" said Billy, and when he said that, Booby Coon almost fell into the Laughing Brook, he was so startled. You see, it was Bobby who had come out on that old log, and at the time he was very busy washing some food. You know, if he can, he always washes his food before eating.

For a minute Bobby lost his temper. But it was only for a minute. Then, having washed his food to his satisfaction, he began to eat his supper, and at the same time to gossip with Billy Mink. He told Billy all the news of the Green Forest, most of which was no news at all to Billy, for there is little going on that Billy doesn't know.

THE ACTS OF MAN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

"A MOUNTAIN fits the hollow of his hand. The west wind is his whisper, and his nod Tumbles the towns upon some little land."

So by immensity men understand Him they call God.

This is not God. I have not given form, My own resemblance, to a thing divine;

I have not heard him trumpeting the storm, Speaking his purpose where the petrels swarm, This God of mine.

God gives us shelter, does not send us gale; God never starved a babe, destroyed a town;

By our own sins we suffer and we fall, By our own weakness wintry winds prevail And shadows go down.

Greed grasps for gold, ambition sails the seas, In hate and error so we plot and plan,

Invite catastrophe, distress, disease— And when they come, then blame not God for these, The acts of man.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—A great many persons were mystified a few weeks ago by the treasury announcement that it had entered into an agreement to buy Chinese silver.

Silver Policy
On the surface, it appeared to be an action by the American government that was wholly a part of its domestic silver policy—a policy that thus far has resulted in no economic benefits at all but has cost American taxpayers rather dearly. Beneath the surface, however, the Chinese silver purchase agreement is one of the most significant moves yet to be made in our foreign policies. I believe it has potential consequences as great or greater than any foreign relations pronouncement to come from the Washington government since World war controversies were liquidated.

To understand the importance of the silver purchase agreement with China, one must examine international relationships over a wide scope. They involve, first and most important of all, the steady inroad made by the Japanese into the Chinese political and economic structure. They embrace, as well, relations of Soviet Russia with China and Japan, and the whole Far Eastern situation for that matter, and the continued efforts of the British to obtain for their nationals additional or restored spheres of influence in China.

Lastly, these international relationships involve, indeed, directly affect, the open door policy respecting Chinese trade. The United States has consistently maintained that China must be open to world trade and in this attitude our nation has had support of the British and some other white nations. On the other hand, the Japanese, while adhering to the open door policy on the surface, have consistently attempted to undermine it directly or by use of the military.

Before the World war it used to be said in China that the international competition there took the form of diplomacy operated through banks and railways. Now, we see the additions of currencies and tariffs to the methods used by the diplomats. The United States is using the currency method—a method attempted by the British without success two years ago—and through this influence, this nation is seeking to expand its trade with China. The Japanese are employing the tariffs to protect their own interests in China and to keep the British and the Americans on the outside.

So, for the first time since 1898, the battle among the nations for the rich lure of China trade is on an economic basis of competition and, it must be said, Japan is in the lead. The Japanese are ahead in this economic warfare chiefly because of their proximity to the territory which is so rich in potential trade.

A year or more ago, the British sent Sir Frederick Leith-Ross of the British treasury to Shanghai to aid the Chinese ministry of finance in the establishment of a currency system. It was not announced, of course, but the real purpose of Sir Frederick's visit was to stabilize Chinese money and link it to the British pound sterling. Diplomats watched the maneuver with great interest because it was expected that Japan's control in the North China provinces would be loosened through British currency influence. But it failed to work that way. The North China provinces simply were separated further from China proper and the Japanese tightened their grip.

Japan Will Oppose
Now, the Americans have tried something of the same scheme. They worked it out on the basis of silver purchase from China but they prescribed that as the American treasury buys Chinese silver, the dollars paid therefor will be deposited in a branch of the Bank of China which will be established in New York. It will result in easy transfers of money where American exporters ship to China.

No one can tell what the consequences will be. In the first instance, Japan can be expected to exert every power her nationals have to thwart the effect of the program. In the next instance, the British are not going to be enthusiastic about the arrangements because the competition between British and American traders has been increasingly sharper since the World war.

Wily Japanese
There is still the further circumstance of Japan's smuggling into China. Having had control of the Chinese tariffs, the wily Japanese proceeded to enforce tariff duties rigidly against everyone except themselves. Stories coming out of North China through diplomatic channels as well as from commercial interests tell of vast smuggling operations by the Japanese. In other words, the Japanese have proceeded to find scores of landing places on Chinese soil where they neglected to place customs houses. The net result is, of course, that the Chinese are being supplied with Japanese goods without the payment of a tariff whereas all other imports from foreign shores must carry the tariff load.

It seems, then, that while we cannot know at this time whether the Japanese will attempt further military movements in North China, it certainly can be said unequivocally that the open door for China foreign trade is at stake in this conflict. Most authorities on foreign affairs with whom I have talked tell me that there is little hope to prevent Japanese political supremacy in China. They cannot move northward because in that direction they butt their heads against the Soviet Russian frontier. The Soviet is armed to the teeth on the border of Manchukuo, but to the south and in the area known as North China, no present method appears for curtailing Japanese power.

Thus, history appears to be repeating itself. The battle for concession that took place in 1898 seems about to be revived and undoubtedly the climax to this conflict has been hastened by the American agreement to acquire Chinese silver.

Few authorities are willing to venture a prediction as to where this new policy, promulgated by President Roosevelt, will lead us. Some insist that it is in accordance with the attitude the United States has held for nearly forty years insofar as Chinese relations are concerned. Others claim that, since Japan has grown to such importance as a world power, the silver agreement may eventually lead us further into the Far Eastern controversy, so far, indeed, that the questions later to arise may involve national honor—and national honor oftentimes is a prelude to war.

While we are looking over Japanese activities in the Far East, we ought not to forget that only a year ago, our congress, under a political lash and the pressure of selfish interests, voted the Philippines their independence. Of course, the Philippine Islands are still under our protection and will be so for several years, but it is most interesting to know that already the Japanese have set about the colonization of portions of the Philippine Islands.

Through the last 20 years, American officials stationed in Manila have kept a watchful eye open to detect any signs of Japanese encroachments. It was not military movements by the Japanese that were feared. It was their well-known capacity for creeping under the edge of the tent and suddenly developing into an economic power.

Official reports now are reaching Washington which indicate amazingly rapid encroachment by the Japanese upon affairs of the islands. One official document shows that Japanese colonists have virtually swallowed up one large Philippine valley. By devious ways, legal and illegal, Japanese farmers have filtered through and have obtained all of the land that is tillable in the Dava valley.

Philippine laws, sponsored by Americans before independence was voted, have been designed to check Japanese colonization and the battle against this has gone on unremittingly since the days of the World war when the Tokyo government first exhibited definite ability to expand its spheres of influence through colonization methods. It should be said, however, that the American officials have been somewhat lax in enforcement of the anti-Japanese laws and the result has been that small colonies of Japanese were planted in various parts of the islands.

Now, it is shown that these colonies have developed into great numerical and economic strength. They seem to have unlimited credit from somewhere for their operations and in the Dava valley, for example, they actually control the price of hemp which is the main agricultural product of that section.

The Japanese are operating in another fashion in the Philippines. It is a well established fact that when legislation is being considered by the Philippine legislative body, it is confronted with a powerful lobby if it is inimical to Japanese interests. Existence of this lobby is known and recognized and many of the Japanese representatives are fearful of consequences to their political careers if they go contrary to the lobby's position.

Such penetration as this into the Philippine economic structure may not be as serious from a world standpoint as the Japanese penetration of North China. Yet, it seems to me that the American government cannot ignore the activity. It may be that Japan has no thought of eventual military and political supremacy over the Philippines but the surface indications at this time are those that have always preceded political and military subjugation of territories and possessions.

It will be recalled, as well, that just such a condition or circumstance as we now see was among the fears expressed by those representatives and senators in our congress who opposed Philippine independence. The opponents of the independence bill in congress dared not openly assert that Japan would be a menace to the island independence. To have done so would have meant international complications.

Lesson for June 14

JESUS CRUCIFIED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 23:33-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—But God commended his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.—Romans 5:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Died for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Savior—Christ the Lord.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Died for Me.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Cross.

It is highly important that every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for himself and then get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death. We escape judgment because judgment fell upon Christ. He was made to be sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him (II Cor. 5:21). No one lacking this experience can truly teach this lesson.

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33). They led him away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. Calvary is the Latin word, and Golgotha is the Hebrew. This is a most significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt symbol of man's condition as a result of sin. Life and intelligence are gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern which once contained them.

II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 33).

Two malefactors were crucified with him. This is in fulfillment of the Scriptures: "He was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12). Personally, he was sinless, but he became sin for us.

III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34). He cried, "Father forgive them." He doubtless had in mind not only the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime. He was absolutely destitute of hatred, even for his betrayer and murderers.

IV. The Revelation of the World (vv. 34-43).

Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified, and representatives of the various classes therein were found around Jesus on the cross. The cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The covetous (v. 34). They gambled for his seamless robe where he was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain. If they had had eyes to see they could have beheld a robe of righteousness being provided in his death.

2. The indifferent (v. 35). "The people stood beholding." They gazed upon him with indifference. The great mass of the world today gazes upon the crucified Christ with stolid indifference.

3. The scoffers (vv. 35-39).

a. The rulers reviled him for his claim to be the Savior. They wanted a Savior but not a crucified one. Many today are religious but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in an atonement made by blood. They uttered a great truth when they said: "He saved others." But he could not save himself and others because God's plan was to save others by giving himself.

b. The soldiers reviled him for claiming to be a king. The title "King of the Jews" had been placed over him in irony. But it was pre-eminently true, for by right of the Davidic covenant, he shall one day be king over Israel (II Sam. 7:16). Through his death, he came into the place of Lordship over all who acknowledge him.

c. The impenitent malefactor (v. 39). This brutal man joined in reviling the Savior, even though he himself was under condemnation.

4. The penitent malefactor (vv. 40-43).

The conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Savior prayed for mercy. The salvation of this penitent man is a remarkable picture of the saving power of Christ. The man confessed his sin as against God and cried to Jesus for salvation. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. His salvation was immediate. Christ said: "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (vv. 44-46). So shocking was this crime that nature herself threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide him from the godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. When the price of sin was paid he cried with a loud voice, showing that he still had vitality, that his death was not through exhaustion but by his sovereign will. He died like no other one in all history. He gave up the ghost, that is, dismissed his spirit.

The Soul

I am fully convinced that the soul is indestructible, and that its activity will continue through eternity. It is like the sun, which, to our eyes, seems to set in night; but it has in reality only gone to diffuse its light elsewhere.—Goethe.

Active in Good Works

Beautiful is the activity that works for good, and the stillness that waits for good; blessed the self-sacrifice of the one, and the self-forgetfulness of the other.

JUNGLE HUNTING EASY, BUT ZOO GETS HIM DOWN

Hans Nagel, curator of the Houston (Texas) zoo, says stalking wild animals in jungles is a tame job compared with that of keeping them in captivity.

From 1904 to 1912 Nagel roamed Africa in search of reptiles, beasts and rare fowls for zoos. And in those eight years he met with an accident only once—a lioness lacerated his leg.

But in wild life in cages—that's a different story, one that has meant hospitals and suffering to Nagel. He bears scars from head to foot. A boa constrictor once almost squeezed his life out. Caesar, the zoo lion, bit him through the shoulder. A stork dived from the top of the bird cage and knocked him unconscious. A kangaroo has kicked him to the ground and bitten his arm. Civet cats, lobo wolves, kinkajous and monkeys have gashed his hands and arms. Bobcats and hyenas have attacked him. Elephants have trod on his feet. "Big Jim," largest of the zoo's alligators, sent Nagel to the hospital for 105 days when he sought to halt its escape.

Firestone
HIGH SPEED TIRE for 1936

AVOID accidents — take no chances — buy your tires on Proof of Performance. Make sure that you and your family will be safe! Skidding, blowouts and punctures caused more than 37,000 accidents last year. Many of these accidents could have been avoided with safe tires.

The new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1936 is the safest driving equipment you can buy. Here is your proof:

PROOF OF GREATEST NON-SKID SAFETY

A leading university made 2,350 tire tests and found that the new scientifically designed Firestone High Speed tread stops a car up to 25% quicker than other tires.

PROOF OF GREATEST BLOWOUT PROTECTION

Every year, since Firestone developed the Gum-Dipped Balloon tire, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling blowout test of the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race.

PROOF OF GREATEST ECONOMY

The new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1936 gives up to 50% longer non-skid mileage. This is proved by the fact that the world's largest transportation companies, such as Greyhound, to whom safety and tire economy means business efficiency, use Firestone Tires. Church and Sunday School

Tinley Park Methodist Church
Paul L. Hastings, Minister

Church School—10 a. m.

Morning Worship—11 a. m.

Although modern Christianity has all too often departed from the spirit of Jesus, that same Christianity yet strives to build its life around His life and teachings. Hence it is well for the Christian church at least occasionally to make something of a special study of this character from whom our faith took its rise, and in whom that faith finds its center.

It is our purpose to devote the sermon period in our summer services of worship to a study of various aspects of Jesus' life. On next Sunday morning we shall consider "the Antecedents of Jesus." We shall try to discover some of the forces which led him at the age of thirty to enter upon a career which finally took him to Calvary.

In our studies we shall be ever seeking truth, and the findings of modern scholarship will be utilized to the full. We shall seek to see Jesus as a sensitive, devoted, and conquering personality, living in a day when unrest and conflict and suffering were everywhere. You are urged to have a share in these studies. Questions relative to any phase of Jesus' life will be welcomed. Write them out and hand them to the minister, and he will try to answer them the following Sunday. We want to make of this summer a period of learning in the very largest meaning of that term.

TOWNSHIP CLUB WINS TWO FROM HOMER A. C.

After winning from Homer 9 to 7 on May 3rd at their home field the Frankfort Township club travelled to Homer last Sunday and again took this strong team into camp by a score of 3 to 1.

A feature of both these games was the excellent pitching of Pat Homerdig, ace twirler of the Frankfort Township club who struck out 11 men in each game.

The hardest and longest drive of last Sunday's game was by George Bennett, a long clout to right field, and if it wasn't for the fact that Homer had an extra fielder in the form of a chicken which the ball struck in its flight, George would have had a triple. As it was a run scored by he was out going to 3rd.

Box score of both games follows:

Farm Electrically Modernized; Public Invited to Inspect It

Farmers and rural residents in this section now have the opportunity to see electricity at work on an "average" farm. The Ray Cryder farm, about one and one-half miles east of Morris on the south side of Route 6, has been modernized electrically, and arrangements have been made to demonstrate to visitors the many uses of electricity in the every day life of the farmer and his family. Operated as a grain and stock farm, it has about 220 acres being worked.

In speaking of the electrified Cryder farm which is open to the public daily from 2 p. m. to 7 p. m. except Sundays, L. C. Stephens, Public Service Company division manager, says "Here you will find examples of how electricity may be put to work on any farm. The home, for instance, is equipped with modern lighting fixtures, up-to-the-minute reading and decorative lamps, electric clocks and electric sewing machine. In the dining room is an indirect lamp with a convenience outlet in the base for the toaster, waffle iron and coffee maker.

"The farm house kitchen," Mr. Stephens went on, "has been made into a place of real convenience, with electric range, latest type electric refrigerator, combination dishwasher sink and cabinet with stainless steel top.

"Among strictly farm helps are the cream separator, and the 66 gallon electric water heater which furnishes an abundance of water at the right temperature. Soft water is pumped electrically from the cistern to several parts of the house.

"On the farm grounds," said Mr. Stephens, "there is a chick brooder with 500 chicks, and a machine shop which is equipped with a saw, lathe, drill press and grinder for keeping farm equipment in good repair and operating condition.

"The cow barn is lighted with electricity, and Mr. Cryder anticipates the use of an electric milker in the very near future. Out by a large corn crib, set with 230 volt service to take care of heavy duty work, a 5 horsepower portable farm motor is used for sawing wood, running the elevator and grinding feed.

"When you visit this farm, Mr. and Mrs. Cryder or the helper will be glad to tell you more about the conveniences which electricity provides for their farm," concluded Mr. Stephens.

1. V-8 ENGINE PERFORMANCE WITH ECONOMY
2. SUPER-SAFETY MECHANICAL BRAKES
3. SAFETY GLASS ALL AROUND AT NO EXTRA CHARGE
4. WELDED STEEL BODY — STEEL STRUCTURE AS WELL AS SURFACE

NO MATTER how you classify your expenditures for car up-keep — it's your total expenditure that counts. How much "dollar mileage" is your car giving you?

Dollars do go farther in the Ford V-8. Modern improved carburetion gives you unusual gasoline mileage with brilliant V-8 performance. Most owners of today's Ford change oil only every 2000 miles and add none between changes.

And after the first few thousand miles you begin to understand what Ford V-8 "dollar mileage" really means.

It gives you more miles per dollar because it gives you all-round economy — low first cost, low up-keep cost, low depreciation and long life — as well as low gasoline and oil consumption. All these are big items if you aim to buy the most economical car.

Chevrolet Magazine Editors Trace The Meaning of O. K.

The editors of the Chevrolet dealers magazine have been doing research work, seeking the origin of the expression O. K., in response to inquiries received from its readers. The expression figures so largely in the company's used car advertising, which features the "Guaranteed O. K. tag" affixed to reconditioned used cars, that dealers became interested in its history.

Several plausible explanations have been uncovered. One of the most likely is that the expression is derived from a seaport on the southern coast of Haiti, which was a famous source of superior rum and tobacco shipped to the American colonies. The name of the port was Aux Cayes (pronounced "oh cay"). The colonists, buying rum or tobacco would ask, "Is it Aux Cayes?" If it was, they knew it was good. The words soon became a symbol for good quality, but the letters O. K. naturally took the place of the words when written by persons not familiar with the real meaning.

Another theory traces O. K. to the Choctaw Indians. In their bartering with other tribes, they used the word "okeh" to designate a piece of merchandise or livestock as fit and good.

Others hold to the theory that the initials O. K., meaning "ordered recorded", being carelessly written on documents, were misread as O. K. and so came to stand for a symbol of correctness. It is also asserted that O. K. as an abbreviation for Artemus Ward's spelling of "all correct," first gained currency among oldtime telegraph operators.

Still another theory is that years ago a customs inspector whose initials were "O. K." stamped them on bales of goods that he passed.

As a verb, the Chevrolet publication says, the expression should be written O. K'd or O. K'ing.

As used by Chevrolet dealers O. K. means that used cars bearing these letters were carefully checked and reconditioned before being put on display.

Chevrolet Buys Former Durant Plant In Calif.

The Chevrolet Motor Company has purchased the former Durant plant at Oakland, Calif., says an announcement by M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of Chevrolet.

"Our present assembly facilities at Oakland have proved inadequate to meet the demand for Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks," said Mr. Coyle. "We have, therefore, acquired this additional plant, which contains 315,000 square feet of floor space."

"By January 1, 1937, Chevrolet will have completed necessary rearrangements in both Oakland plants, and will then operate them as one unit."

"Both passenger car and truck capacity will be increased when the new plant goes into operation."

The former Durant plant was built for assembly purposes and is well adapted to Chevrolet operations. It consists of a main building 600 feet long on Fourteenth street and has three wings extending to the rear, one 600 feet deep and two 400 feet deep. The buildings of modern construction, are two stories high except for one wing. A two story office building faces Fourteenth St. This purchase will increase the number of Chevrolet assembly plants to eleven and the total number of Chevrolet manufacturing and assembly plants to twenty-four.

A Telephone Can't Hoe a Garden!

No indeed. Nor can it milk, plow or do any other manual farm work. Yet, without the ability to do any of these things the telephone has its indispensable place and value to the farmer. He uses it because it SAVES and EARNS MONEY! It is a fact, proved by experience, that the farmer with a telephone can often call in advance and assure himself of the best prices when he sells and the best bargains when he buys. In dollars and cents the telephone saves and earns more than its small cost—often many times more. And it is a convenience and a means of protection to home and family. Order a telephone today.

Tinley Ball Team Loses To Worth

Tinley Park had a baseball game Sunday, and was defeated by a score of 6 to 0. Worth was the winner, not by playing superior ball, but by the disgusting display of arguing on every decision of the umpire. I don't believe that the people who come to watch these games derive any pleasure in seeing a bunch of baseball players run to the umpire in an attempt to reverse his decision on every ball that is pitched and every play that is made on the diamond. This practice will ruin the game quicker than anything else.

The men picked to umpire the games in the Southwest Suburban league have been agreed upon by the managers of the various teams represented and they are notified a week in advance who will officiate at these games, and yet with this understanding the players insist upon contradicting the umpire's decision without exception. If this is sportsmanship and a benefit to the game, then let us have 3 umpires and play 5 innings of baseball and allow 2 hours for arguing and invite the spectators to join in. The Tinley Park baseball team will continue to play for the good of the game and for what benefit it derives from the sport. Be it win or lose. If we finish at the bottom of the league we will have the whole-hearted support of our friends who have watched our ball games and contributed so generously to the past-time. This is our aim, and we will not be influenced otherwise by trophy, cash or diplomas.

The Home Town Paper

"Why not subscribe to the old home town paper?"

When eventide is drawing near, and chickens gone to rest,

You sit in the old arm chair, thinking of what is best.

A peaceful feelin' comes o'er you and a smile replaces the frown,

As you read the little paper, from your old home town.

It tells you all about the home folk and of those who come and go,

And all about the social, down at Uncle Joe's.

And the boys who stole the melons, from the patch of Billy Brown.

The headlines of the paper are from life's rugged way.

And soon I'll get the gossip tho' I'm many miles away.

If Elmer has the measles, or the flu is going round

I read it in the paper from my old home town.

I read the Chicago Tribune and the St. Louis papers too—

Including poems there by Guest, before the day is through.

An then I wish to rest my mind, with news that's nowhere found

Except in the weekly paper, from my old home town.

Flag Day, 1936

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"The work that we do is the making of the flag."

America, as this is written, is preparing for its annual and reverent celebration of Flag Day.

From every public building, from millions of private homes, will fly the standard which has been the symbol of American valor and of American love of freedom through a century and a half of glorious history.

What is America doing today to perpetuate those qualities—woven into the flag by the strength and the courage of our fathers?

Are our politicians preaching valor when they urge the sons of pioneers to deny their own initiative, their own self-reliance, and to turn instead to a centralized government for direction, for ideas and for support?

Are the new economic prophets preaching love of freedom when they ask our people to relinquish their constitutional right to govern themselves, so it may be delivered into the hands of temporary officeholders and bureaucrats?

The men and women who braved both danger and hardship to carry the flag across a continent wouldn't have thought so. Few Americans who love personal liberty and independence would think so today. If they did, our flag would lose its meaning.

Franklin K. Lane once personified the American flag as speaking thus to an humble worker:

"I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become . . .

"I am all that you hope to be, and have the courage to try for . . .

"I am the Constitution and the Courts, statutes and the statute-makers, soldier and dreadsought, counsellor and clerk . . .

"I am the clutch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution . . .

"I am what you make me, nothing more."

We know what our fathers made the flag. Can we afford to nullify their labors?

HOME CANNERS WARNED AGAINST FOOD POISONING

Only Reliable Information
Should Be Used, Says
U. of I. Authority.

Many outbreaks of botulism (food poisoning), all caused by home-canned foods, was charged to state agencies and certain types of publications because of their failure to properly inform homemakers of the correct methods of canning foods, by Prof. Fred W. Tanner, head of the University of Illinois department of bacteriology.

No outbreaks of botulism have been attributed to factory-canned food packed in America since 1925. Dr. Tanner pointed out, and asserted that the art of food preservation by canning in the factory has never been on a sounder basis than today.

"This statement becomes still more significant," he said, "when the relatively small amounts of home-canned foods in contrast to the large amounts of factory-canned goods are considered."

"Although the U. S. Department of Agriculture has placed itself on record very emphatically as opposed to the use of methods known to be dangerous, and distributes a reliable publication to the home canners in Farmers' Bulletin 1471, only 10 extension services connected to state agricultural experiment stations have seen fit to adopt similar recommendations."

"Many publications of manufacturers of canning supplies for the home-maker are unsound bacteriologically," he said, "and may mislead a home-maker into situations where she may not only subject her family to serious health hazards but pack a product which will show high incidence of spoilage when stored under average conditions in the home."

"Since excessive spoilage of canned foods can be curbed by adequate processing, home economists experts should give advice which will result in a sound product," Dr. Tanner explained.

"The boiling-water process for non-acid foods and meats should be abandoned as a wasteful, dangerous method," he warned.

"Over processing of non-acid foods should be abandoned, since it results in preserved foods which will not keep."

The steam-pressure cooker—and no other methods—should be used for the canning of non-acid foods, he explained.

"Until preservation of perishable food products by heating in wash-tubs, wash-boilers, lard cans, and other such containers is entirely eliminated, outbreaks of food poisoning will continue. Health officers and others can play an important role in directing attention to sound practice for preservation of foods by canning in the home," he said.

X-Ray Aids in Fight Against Typhoid Carriers

Chicago, Ill.—Again man-made x-ray, guided by a scientist of the University of Illinois, is winning another battle with disease.

The University's College of Medicine reports that it has been able to use x-ray treatments over the liver and gall bladder of chronic carriers of typhoid germs and thus effect a cure.

There still exists in the state of Illinois about 1,200 cases of typhoid fever per year. Doctors know that these are infected from people who have recovered from typhoid fever and are apparently healthy, but who still pass the germs in their feces. These x-ray treatments are attacks upon the remaining reservoirs for typhoid germs in our population.

The x-ray treatments are not severe, but are light doses given once every two weeks and are repeated only five or six times.

The patients are not sick. They do not go to bed and the typhoid bacteria gradually disappear from the feces.

Members of the medical profession say that this new x-ray treatment is the only method so far devised that offers the possibility of success in the three-fold advantage of being practical, economical, and effective.

University Enrolls 14,036 for Year

The total University of Illinois enrollment of resident students for the year is 14,036, it was announced by Registrar G. P. Tuttle.

The figure includes registration for both the Chicago and Urbana-Champaign departments, as well as 2,793 who attended the summer session but who were not enrolled during either of the other semesters. The total summer enrollment was 2,719 in Urbana and 74 in Chicago.

The figure for the down state departments is 12,917 and for Chicago 1,119 for the entire year. The total includes 9,951 men and 4,065 women.

The general registration is divided as follows: Liberal Arts and Sciences, 3,802; Commerce, 1,952; Education, 619; Engineering, 1,275; Agriculture, 1,071; Fine and Applied Arts, 587; Physical Education, 318; Journalism, 171; Law, 292; Library Science, 72; Graduate School, 1,079; Summer Session (net) 1,782; Medicine, 640; Dentistry, 147; and Pharmacy, 219.

"Blood Bank" for Expectant Mothers. Chicago—A hospital "blood bank," into which expectant mothers may deposit as much as a quart of their own blood shortly before the crucial time of confinement, and which may be drawn upon for life-giving strength during childbirth, with further reductions in maternity death rates, is suggested by the University of Illinois College of Medicine.

"The principal advantage of the banked blood method obviously is one of speed in supplying immediate transfusions without the sometimes fatal delay of searching for a professional or other donor of suitable type."

Her voice broke. "Ridder'll be free in a few weeks," she pled. "Wait, Mr. Gilbert. You don't know how many innocent people you may drag into this."

Barry hesitated. He now remembered that he had told Pat he loved her. "It didn't get me anywhere," Barry thought. "It never will. I'm not even sure that she heard me, but I'm glad I spoke, all the same."

Aloud, he said, "I'll wait, Pat."

She glanced up at him, gratefully.

"Not until the trial, though," he warned her. "I won't take that chance. I won't let this girl, Peggy, go on suffering until then. But now I believe I know who murdered Kelly. Someone who came into the house while your father was there. Someone so full of the thought of it that she bungled the new lock on the front door."

"You think—" Hamblidge began.

"I think that's why it blew open. And I think, too, that revealing your visit—now—would be merely 'tipping our hand.' The person I suspect has already covered her tracks pretty well."

"Then," Pat said, almost incredulously—"Then you're not going to repeat this story?"

"Not even to Winslow. He hasn't much more faith in my 'sleuthing' than you have. We'll leave him to work out Ridder's defense. For the present let's agree on an armistice. Mutual silence. If the time arrives when I feel I must speak, I'll come to you first. Is that fair?"

"Quite."

From the very beginning, Barry had suspected Mrs. Kelly. "She sued for divorce recently, and withdrew the case," Peter Winslow had told him. "Do you think that might indicate that she killed her husband?" Barry did, and one discovery after another confirmed the idea. "But," as Barry had reminded his city editor, "Mrs. Kelly was in Harlem. She went to a dance."

"Ever hear of faking an alibi?" Harwood had asked, advising a "check up."

That sounded promising until, as the first move in his investigation, Barry dug up The Herald Tribune of "the morning after the body was found." Mrs. Kelly had told him that paper contained a full record of her social activities, and it did. "At the time of the murder, Mrs. Kelly, who sued for divorce recently, and withdrew the case, was awarding prizes at a fancy dress ball of the Cross-town Chowder and Outing club in Harlem Gardens. This was at midnight, and the other judges were..."

"Kelly wasn't killed at midnight," Barry realized. "He wasn't killed until two hours after midnight. If Mrs. Kelly got through with her prizes—"

"Well," Barry exclaimed, climbing into the subway. What next? Say nothing, and saw wood—that's what. One more link in this chain, and I'm going to change a lot of people's minds about me and my 'sleuthing!'"

Monday morning, Barry dropped in on Peter Winslow. He was still carrying the Ridder check for $2,000, and he wanted Peter to take part of it as a retainer, and bank the rest for Peggy.

Peter did accept it, as a matter of course, though he waved aside the offer of a retainer. "I'm in no hurry," he insisted. "Wait 'til I do something. I know you're good for it."

Obviously, he was doing a great deal. "Got the defense all planned," he declared, showing Barry a thick sheaf of memoranda. "Loose-leaf" memoranda it was, in the most literal sense—scrawled on waste paper and the backs of envelopes. Order may be Nature's first law, but it wasn't this lawyer's.

"No, I'm not neat," Peter smiled, intercepting Barry's glance. "Except personally, and that's Julie's achievement. Julie's Mrs. Winslow, of course, and she buys all my clothes. Lays 'em out for me, too—even the boutonniere. I often ask her if she wants me to look like a gigolo. Don't worry about this stuff, though,"—indicating the sheaf of memoranda. "Miss Clark'll have that straight by night."

Miss Clark was his secretary. "Women keep you in order," he went on smiling; "that's about the only thing I have against 'em."

"There's nothing to this case," he continued. "I'll come to trial in a few weeks now, and be over in a few hours. Want to hear what I'm going to ask that Filippino?"

Listening, Barry felt again that his own activities had been merely foolish. A dozen questions disposed of all the evidence the butler had given so far, and made it apparent that what he actually knew of young Ridder's visit was exactly nothing. "You heard a quarrel? A violent quarrel? And you were alarmed? That's why you came upstairs? Rogers left then? And the lights were still burning in the front room? If you were alarmed, why didn't you knock at the door, to make sure your master was all right? Not so very much alarmed, were you? In fact, you weren't alarmed at all until you saw what had happened." This was the beginning of an inquiry that twisted about, doubled on itself, and was likely to leave any jury on earth too uncertain to convict anyone of a capital offense. "Particularly, anyone with a wife and child," Peter said.

"Peggy was in here Friday," he added. "She looks as though she'd been dragged through a knot-hole. I wanted her to come to us for the week-end, but we're in town most of the time. I'm going to talk to the Hamblidges about having her out there."

"That would be great," Barry kindled. "They'd be company for each other. It wouldn't do Pat a bit of harm to learn how the other half lives."

"Right!" Peter exclaimed heartily. "I'll call Pat today."

In spite of himself, as he was leaving, Barry mentioned his Harlem theory.

Peter listened intently.

"Well," he said, "you are a Hawkshaw."

"You'd be surprised if I landed Mrs. Kelly, wouldn't you?"

"No," Peter replied, smiling again, "but I'd be terribly surprised if you didn't begin suspecting someone else ten minutes afterward."

CHAPTER VIII

The more Barry thought of it, the more certain he became that the Judge's story, and the revelations in Harlem, removed the only reason for questioning Harwood's hypothesis. When the divorce action was filed, Kelly had promised not to see Betty Barclay again. That promise had induced the withdrawal of the petition. And then Betty Barclay had phoned, while Kelly was out, and just as Mrs. Kelly was going. In Harwood's own words, Mrs. Kelly "went wild." Falling to get legal counsel, she taxied to Harlem, and there she got "madder and madder." Just after midnight, she drove home, and found Kelly alone—drunk, and with the accumulated wrath engendered by two trying interviews. There were words, and a handy decanter.

The design began being almost too nearly perfect.

He found Peggy doing some mending in her dingy room. She had lost flesh, and seemed to be always staring at nothing. "It's Jacky," she confided in Barry. "I'm worried about him."

The youngster looked pale and ill.

"Look here, Peg; will you have lunch with me tomorrow at the Astor? I want you to meet somebody."

"Miss Hamblidge?"

"Yes."

"She'd turn up her nose at me like an elephant reaching for peanuts."

"I don't think so. Anyway, I want you to know each other."

The appointment was made, at last—one o'clock—and Barry called Pat. "Well, the trail's hot, all right."

"Tell me about it."

"I don't dare over the wire. You know; operators. Come in and lunch with me?"

"When?"

"Tomorrow at one."

Pat was eagerly anxious to hear his news, and there was no other way. But, if Pat's nose remained static when she learned she was to encounter Peggy, her mouth straightened.

"Why? What have I in common with this girl?"

"Well," Barry answered, flatly, "you're keeping her husband in prison."

Pat flushed.

"You owe her something for that, don't you think? What're you being so high hat about? This girl's Mrs. John Clarke Ridder, Jr., you know."

"I'm not being high hat. Only, naturally, just now, I don't feel much like meeting strangers. Especially strangers with whom I have no community of interest."

Lunching together, however, it soon became evident that there was a "community of interest." Pat warmed to this painted chorus girl, fearful for her husband exactly as Pat was fearful for her father. Though Peg didn't know it, their fate hung on the same thread. Both heard Barry's account of his discoveries with regard to Mrs. Kelly.

"It seems pretty conclusive," Pat said.

"I never thought of that dame—I mean, woman," Peg added. "Would that get Jack off quick?"

Barry explained his understanding that, if there were definite proof of another person's having committed a crime, anyone in custody was released immediately. "The district attorney moves for a dismissal of the indictment, I believe," he told them.

"Gee!" Peggy said, with the tears in her eyes.

Pat was no fool, and she found herself respecting and liking this "night club hoofer." She was Mrs. Ridder, after all. "Whoever the girl might have been, it was the tears beginning to dissolve the beads that stirred Pat. She had never seen anyone cry that way before—cry with her lips twisted into a smile."

"You've certainly stuck to your husband," Pat observed.

"Why not? When you really love anybody, you don't care what they do, or have done, or what they are. It's what they are to you that counts. You're not thinking what you're going to get, but what you're going to give. That is, the right kind of girl is."

"Gosh, she's trying to help me with Pat," Barry thought.

The upshot was that Pat took Peg and the youngster to Southampton the next morning. "Peter suggested it," she told Barry. "And, of course, you're right—I do owe them something."

It wasn't the debt that did it, Barry realized. It was Jacky. Peg wanted Patricia to see him, and the house was so near. There really wasn't any good excuse for not going. So, for the first time in her life, Pat sniffed fried fish in an entrance hall, and tripped on worn stair carpets, and found herself stifling in a back room without air or sunshine. She'd known people lived like that, of course, but, somehow, she'd never thought much about it. She found herself thinking now. "If I had to spend one night in this place—That's what's the matter with the boy."

It was arranged that Evans was to drive them out, and come back for Barry on Thursday.

When Barry left Pat at her hotel, she said, "You seem to be everybody's friend, Mr. Gilbert. It's a little hard to understand, considering—"

"Considering that I'm an adventurer and an impostor?"

"Yes."

"Yes," Barry repeated, "but that's how you learn what friendship means."

That night, Barry went to the Coconut Bar.

"I mustn't overlook anything," he reflected.

There wasn't much to overlook in the Coconut Bar. Not in the way of clothing, at all events. The lobby was full of men, more or less surreptitiously glancing at framed photographs of girls whose costumes might almost have been packed in a vanity case. Inside was a square dancing floor with tables about it, like the seats about a prize ring. Above, there was a balcony with more tables, except at one spot, occupied by offices.

There were three shows a night, the amateur Hawkshaw discovered from his menu—at seven, eleven, and one.

It wasn't hard to get acquainted with any of the girls. One had only to look prosperous, and incline his head an inch or two in the direction of a vacant chair. "We're not supposed to do this," Violet Fane informed Barry, "but Luis's got a swell stand-in."

Barry had his expense account and his ingratiating grin, and used both to the limit. It wasn't long before the blonde was telling the story of her life. "I bin with Luis ever since I was a kid," she bragged. "He's a swell guy, you oughta know him. I'll give you a tumble after the next show."

Luis was most affable. A sentimentalist, but a business man, with a keen eye to spenders, and a withering contempt for tight-wads.

A flashy young fellow, Morano was, who wore sporty clothes, and much jewelry. Slim and dapper, his shining ebon hair was slicked back from his forehead. He had a long, thin nose, and straight, thin lips, and a slight but rather curious impediment in his speech. His voice could be very soft at times.

"Tender hearted, Luis is," Miss Fane declared later. "I've seen him cry when somebody sang about mother, or the kid, or sumpin'. That loved-her-and-lost-her stuff specially. He was married once."

"Didn't it take?"

"Sure, it took. That's why he cries. The Jane died, or sumpin'. Know what Luis did—when he got the coin, I mean? Bought the house they used to live in, and went on livin' there alone, with a couple of servants."

"Gee!"

"Ain't that romantic? I'll say so! He's still got the servants, too. They all moved to a farm, somewhere in Jersey, a couple'a years ago. Would you believe it—he drives out every morning, after the last show. Nuts about horses, Luis is. Not to bet on. Just likes 'em."

"Learned about horses in Fauquier county," Luis said, returning at that instant. "I lived there 'til I was nineteen, and that's all they know. Go on, Vi; you'll be late."

"I never was late for a show yet," she retorted. "Nor out of one. Not in all the years I've worked for you."

"That's straight," Morano admitted, as she was leaving. "Never been out of a show in her life. She's a swell girl, Vi."

There wasn't much to be got at the Coconut Bar; not that Violet and Morano weren't willing to talk. Morano's romance had left him a gentle melancholy—or, perhaps, he was only worried about business. But, if he had anything to conceal, it certainly seemed to have no relation to Kelly. On that subject, everything was open and above board.

"Just a gorilla," Morano said of the Big Boss, the next night, when Barry returned to the Coconut Bar.

"Oh, Mike was a' right," Miss Fane protested.

"Sure!" her employer agreed. "He wouldn't do nothing worse than steal pennies from a dead baby. Pal of Vi's though," Luis added, winking at Barry.

"Yeh," Violet declared, dryly; "until that Barclay dame came along."

"He was in here that evening, wasn't he?" Barry asked.

"Yeh. Just a few hours before they croaked him."

"He had a girl pinched, or something?"

"Yeh," Morano repeated. "Nice kid, too. Took her around to the station in them things."

"I don't blame the Jane's husband for getting sore," Morano continued, "though bumping a guy off for that's going a little too far."

"Kelly was souse," Miss Fane said.

"Yeh. Plenty. And he thought the kid was picking his pocket. Nothin' to it."

WORLD HAS NEED FOR JACK OF ALL TRADES, PROF. SAYS

Asking a lad what he intends to be when he grows up is apt to bring a more or less amusing response from the boy's limited viewpoint. While the proper selection of a lifetime occupation is an indispensable concomitant of getting somewhere, the earliest choice is not always the wisest, because the pattern of life usually unfolds various unexpected complications. Nevertheless a "jack of all trades" has traditionally been held in economic disrepute.

It is interesting, therefore, to hear from Dr. Harry Dexter Kitson, professor of education at Columbia, on the subject of vocational adaptability. Having just completed a survey of effective pupil guidance, Doctor Kitson suggests that young persons rid themselves of the notion that they are created for just one special occupation and should prepare themselves for two or more, the world having need for more "jacks of all trades." He points out that when one industry is dull, another is active; and thus the variously adept worker is assured of steady employment.

Broadly considered, the advantage of learning several things is that they contribute to one's feeling of independence, making for a fuller life. Occupational ignorance is never bliss, whereas personal versatility invariably saves one time, money, irritation, regret, and varied misgiving, above all adding to one's interest in life. And the more things a person can do, the more interesting he is to others, the more self-reliant, the more in tune with the zestful adventure of living.—Buffalo Courier-Express.
